Reflections On Fieldwork In Morocco

My anthropology professor borrowed Reflections of fieldwork in Morocco by Paul Rabinow to me, and I hastily read it. It 19s thin, true, and easy to read, and quite a breath of air in the sea of anthropological books not dealing with fieldwork, which I deem just so important and under-discussed.

Reflections on Fieldwork in Morocco by Paul Rabinow

But at the time when Paul Rabinow wrote his Reflections, there were surprisngly little books attempting to define what fieldwork is and giving aspiring anthropologists some tools and lessons on how to pursue their field research successfully. Reflections on Fieldwork in Morocco thus soon became required reading in anthropology classes, and many graduate students were encouraged to hold a research diary in which they would record similar introspective thoughts in parallel to their scholarly ...

Reflections on Fieldwork in Morocco would be Rabinow's first experience doing fieldwork, qualifying him as an 'experienced anthropologist' among his graduate school friends. Rabinow's monograph is a deeply personal account about the excitement and frustrations embodied in the process of translating academic knowledge into the real world, the art of interpretation, and the simultaneous observation and experience of 'otherness' using a modified phenomenological method.
